

Excerpt from CNN under Media Bias, Activism & Fake News

— Democrats, spare me your hypocrisy on guns....Speaking of honesty, if you're like me you turn on the news to get information -- a set of facts. If you want opinion, you come to shows like mine, where our prejudices and biases and opinions are made known; there's no false pretenses that you're getting pure objectivity. Well, if you turned on cable news at any time since the shooting, it's safe to say you didn't get the news. That's because when it comes to guns, news anchors take off their journalist hats and put on their activist hats. And they do it without shame or disclaimers because they believe righteousness is the same thing as being right....Then they put a Democrat lawmaker on air or a former Republican lawmaker who shares their point of view to complain that Republicans will never do anything about guns. They never, these journalists, ask those lawmakers what Democrats did about gun control when they had the White House, House and Senate for two years under Barack Obama. Because the answer is NOTHING....Maybe if they stopped disguising activism as journalism those Republicans would talk with them. Maybe if they could have these conversations without offending half the country they would. But that is not what happens. Instead, we keep having the same one-sided conversations on the news and then pounding our fists that nothing ever changes. Look, this issue is hard. It's emotional. It's important. I want change as much as anybody. We'll never get it as long as these are the people leading the discussion.
